Using Primary Sources in the Elementary Classroom

The Emancipation Proclamation:
The Nation's Blessing or the Nation's Burden?

I. Overview:

This lesson seeks to engage fifth grade students to read and analyze the varied reactions of diverse groups of both the Northern and Southern society to the Emancipation Proclamation using primary sources on the Library of Congress Web Site and other sources.

II. Goal of lesson:

The goal of this lesson is to give the students the opportunity to examine primary source documents of the Library of Congress, primary sources at other locations and other sources; and to have the students develop and apply an age appropriate understanding of the Emancipation Proclamation and its effects on both Northern and Southern societies while in the midst of a civil war.

III. Objectives:

After completing the lesson the students will be able to:

- A. show a basic understanding of what the Emancipation Proclamation is and is not
- B. explain what the Emancipation Proclamation did and did not do
- C. dramatize the reactions of contrasting segments of both Northern and Southern cultures during the Civil War

IV. Investigative Inquiries

- A. What were the reasons for the variety of reactions in the Northern and Southern states as well as the Border States?
- B. How did this document change the focus and nature of the war?
- C. Were there similar reactions that crossed to both sides of the conflict?

V. Learning to use primary sources

- A. Inquiry discussion as to where to find information for research
- B. Model the use of the Library of Congress for a class read/study of the Emancipation

Proclamation.

C. For practice do a small group Treasure Hunt; a work sheet on a related topic using the Library of Congress and other sources.

VI. Important Instructional Items

A. Time required: 4 to 5 class periods of one hour each

B. Recommended grade range for this lesson: 5th to 8th grades

C. Subjects areas covered in lesson:

1. Social Science

2. English and Language Arts

3. Fine Arts

F. Tech aide if needed

X. Procedures

Day 1: The students will listen to the teacher read Abe's Honest Words: The Life of Abraham Lincoln by Doreen Rappaport. Inquiry based discussion centered on words and/or phrases such as: emancipation, proclamation, resolution, state compensation etc. Students broken into pairs to research various individuals or groups of individuals from both the North and South during the Civil War. (The class having been already divided for a Civil War simulation that is already in progress in class.)

Day 2: I will be using an interactive Power Point presentation (developed and created by Scot Mortensen) to guide the class during the opening session of the lesson. Then, if needed search for topics, step by step to the Library of Congress web site and topics for practice using a worksheet as a guide in order to further familiarize the students with both the procedures and the site(s).

Days 3&4: These two days will be used to gather information on note cards for a simulated debate between the two sides, North and South. (Beginning with the reading of The Emancipation Proclamation by The Honorable Abraham Lincoln.)

Day 5: The students having practiced (and will, if desired, dress as the part portrayed) will engage in a controlled debate monitored by a teacher and aide representing the respective sides in the conflict.

Extensions

It will be possible from this point on to have the students to further explore the Library of Congress as we come into other units of study. For example, The Immigration Experience, each of the decades of the twentieth century highlighting the events and people who shaped our future,

The Great Depression and World War II just to name a few.
