BY

DEBORAH L. HUMPHREYS, S.C.

tell me all about this – daughters, dancing away, gliding along the cobbled road to a promised paradise, an aisle facing an altar, a dream to be willing and faithful as Abraham now tell me how it is your soul burns but not your feet, even through inflamed calluses and the street though a quiet rue, is slick with rain, spit and piss dare you ask permission to beg hospitality

the shelter of the homeless the instruction of the unschooled and grasp at the same hopes the least of the coin

Cordiality, properly speaking, is the effect of that charity which one has in one's heart.

(Saint Vincent de Paul, conference to the Daughters of Charity, 2 June 1658)
