Welcome Address*

*Mary K. Whitmer

MARY K. WHITMER: What a lovely introduction, both of me and the seminar. I would just like to welcome you all. We work very hard on this seminar every year. The Commercial Law League of America is very proud to have as one of its partners the DePaul University College of Law. We work with them on the Business and Commercial Law Journal and on this program. I think that the greatest joy for us is mentoring some of their law students who have shown an interest in commercial and bankruptcy law.

This is an important symposium for us. Our board has broken their session and have all come up to welcome you. We want to just say that we're thrilled that you're here, and we hope you enjoy the program.

This program is a very special one. I have heard Professor White speak many times, and he is excellent every time. Also, please don't miss the luncheon speaker, Bill Brant. He is very knowledgeable. He's quite entertaining, and I don't know if he's ever uncertain. He always gives you something to think about, and he's very definite about his views. So you will have something to talk about later, if you go to the luncheon program.

Thank you very much for coming to attend this seminar, and we welcome you.
