FOREWORD

Administrative agencies continue to proliferate within the federal and state governments. As the number of agencies grow in response to the regulatory needs of an increasingly complicated society, a concomitant expansion of administrative adjudication, rulemaking, investigating, prosecuting and dispute settling takes place. The exercise of these powers must be continuously reviewed and analyzed. Therefore, the Board of Editors has selected for publication articles which focus on two important Illinois administrative agencies, and it is our hope that this issue will encourage greater discussion of the problems of state administrative agencies.
