Blazing Trails,
Extending Boundaries

This issue of DePaul Magazine beautifully encapsulates the broad scope of learning opportunities DePaul makes available to engage, educate and enlighten students. Our university is a place where leaders in business, government, the humanities and the arts, to name just a few, come together to create illuminating forums of thought and dialogue. Trailblazing programs that involve community, extend the boundaries of contemporary disciplines and give rise to innovative partnerships show DePaul preparing students to be successful, well-informed citizens of the world.

From the research being conducted by our undergraduates to the academic accolades earned by our Blue Demon athletes, DePaul students are making us proud. The good work realized by student-run organizations, along with programs targeted toward young Chicagoans, extends the reach of our Vincentian mission. This mission resonates through the greater DePaul family, as evidenced by the thousands of alumni and friends whose university experiences have equipped them to think critically about the challenges of today and engage with their communities to find solutions. I invite you to learn more about opportunities and outcomes in this issue of our magazine.
