Professor Emeritus Alexander Davis Celebrates 100th Birthday

Alexander V. Davis, a former professor in DePaul’s modern languages department, celebrated his 100th birthday on Sept. 15. Davis, who specialized in teaching Spanish, began his career at DePaul in 1952; he retired in 1981 as a full professor. Davis is a member of the DePaul Emeritus Society, an organization open to long-term faculty and staff members who have retired.

Davis recalls his beginnings and his immigration to the United States in 1932. “I was born in the small German town of Bad Nauheim, near Frankfurt. When I was 16, my family immigrated to the United States. I attended DePaul Academy and got interested in studying Spanish.” He completed his undergraduate work at the University of Chicago but remembers that the Depression made it difficult to continue his education. “Things were very expensive in Mexico, so I decided to go there to finish my studies,” he remembers. Davis received his master’s and doctoral degrees from the National Autonomous University of Mexico. He went on to teach at The Ohio State University, at the University of Maine and in Buenos Aires, Argentina, before coming to DePaul.

In 1956, when the Delta Epsilon Chapter of Sigma Delta Pi, the National Collegiate Hispanic Honor Society, was established at DePaul, Davis was named an honorary member. In 1964, he was elected to the presidency of the Pan American Board of Education, Chicago Chapter, an organization dedicated to developing an understanding of Latin America in the United States. The organization has ceased operations.

Nancy Koga (LAS ’65) keeps in touch with her former professor and remembers Davis’ influence. “He helped me get a scholarship to study in Spain and inspired me to see the world.” She notes that Davis has stayed active and interested in travel. “He taught on a naval ship after retirement,” says Koga. “He was traveling on his own until a few years ago. In his early 90s, he went to Paris.”

Davis enjoys reflecting on his 30 plus years in Chicago. “Life has changed so much in the last few generations. Things used to be more parochial. In Chicago, you still had your ethnic neighborhoods, and listening to music in different communities was like going around the world. Now things are more cosmopolitan, and I think we are more understanding. Things are better as a whole now.”

Davis says fondly, “I think of DePaul every day. For me, DePaul was something very special. I was very much impressed with the Vincentian fathers. Today we live in a very competitive world, and at DePaul there are people who give to others—you still have that personal touch and so many people who still care.”

Correction

In the Summer 2015 DePaul Magazine article “Hidden Treasure: Special Collections and Archives,” an illustration from an 1817 book by William Mudford is incorrectly described as “British and Russian forces following the Battle of Waterloo.” The caption should have read “British and Russian forces.” We regret the error.

Event Recaps

Young Alumni Tour and Tasting at CH Distillery
Have you ever wondered how vats of grain transform into potent spirits? In September, recent graduates learned the science behind vodka and gin production during a “spirited” tour of CH Distillery in Chicago’s vibrant West Loop neighborhood. Because a behind-the-scenes experience wouldn’t be complete without a taste test, participants were delighted to try a traditional pairing of chilled vodka with rye bread and pickles and then continue socializing after the tour.

County Line Orchard Outing
As autumn’s crisp air descended on the Midwest region and leaves turned red and orange, alumni welcomed the season with a “Sunday Funday” at County Line Orchard. Forty acres of juicy pick-your-own apples awaited participants after lunch and a highlights tour of the grounds, which included a corn maze and barnyard animals. Several lucky attendees won DePaul swag during a raffle, and everyone went home with a mini pumpkin souvenir and happy memories.

Summer Walking Tours
Alumni across the country donned their walking shoes and hit the pavement in August. On the first day of the month, graduates explored President Lincoln’s Cottage at the Soldiers’ Home in Washington, D.C., where Lincoln conceptualized the Emancipation Proclamation. The following weekend, New York City alumni nibbled their way through a food tour of the Lower East Side while their Chicagoland counterparts sampled cupcakes, doughnuts and bagels in Lincoln Park.
