Perros
Francisco Aragón

Follow this and additional works at: https://via.library.depaul.edu/dialogo Part of the Latin American Languages and Societies Commons

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://via.library.depaul.edu/dialogo/vol8/iss1/21

This Rincón Creativo is brought to you for free and open access by the Center for Latino Research at Via Sapientiae. It has been accepted for inclusion in Diálogo by an authorized editor of Via Sapientiae. For more information, please contact wsulliv6@depaul.edu, c.mcclure@depaul.edu.
Perros

Cover Page Footnote
This article is from an earlier iteration of Diálogo which had the subtitle "A Bilingual Journal." The publication is now titled "Diálogo: An Interdisciplinary Studies Journal."

This rincón creativo is available in Diálogo: https://via.library.depaul.edu/dialogo/vol8/iss1/21
Perros

Or the one my sister came upon, camping along the banks of the river that named him, red bandana around his snowy neck the day—from the top of the stairs—mom coaxes Yuba in. He mentions his:

the first de raza alemana, he says and I'm almost charmed by the voice—telling of how he'd tie his German shepherd to a pole, escort her to church; Plaza Santo Domingo flanked by the park, kiosk beside the roasting beef—pleasant olor de carne asada wafting over to the bench after mass where they talked—she mostly: her sewing, her trips to Panama in search of wholesale fabrics...

—I try to imagine it: Managua in the fifties, around the time my father's plane lifts off, touches down, sending for her months later, big with my sister, as I also try to imagine him on the other end of the line—in his sixties, portly, sugar in his blood, a touch of something on his breath as he speaks of the Sacramento River—pole&gear, sixpack,

Rocky and Comet slinking behind —but the car's busted now, he says basting in gravel in Corning. He gets to bed past three, watching Cristina, the Tuesday Night Fights—sunk in a beat-up armchair: replay of that memorable bout, Aaron Pryor delivering a flurry of shots to the head, Alexis Arguello absorbing them...

During the phone call we talk dogs. He had three,

we had two—something I suppose, in common;
this talk of ours

a first.

by Francisco Aragón

Francisco Aragón is the author of Puerta del Sol (Bilingual Press, 2004). His anthology publications include Inventions of Farewell: A Book of Elegies (Norton), American Diaspora: Poetry of Displacement (University of Iowa Press), and Under the Fifth Sun: Latino Literature from California (Heyday Books). His poems have appeared in various publications, including Luna, Puerto de Sol, and Terra Incognita—a bilingual journal edited out of Madrid and New York. He is the founding editor and publisher of Momotombo Press, which promotes emerging Latino writers. Currently a Fellow at the Institute for Latino Studies at Notre Dame. Contact him at: editor@momotombopress.com